Lewis River Basin Anadromous Fish Barriers

STREAM SURVEYS

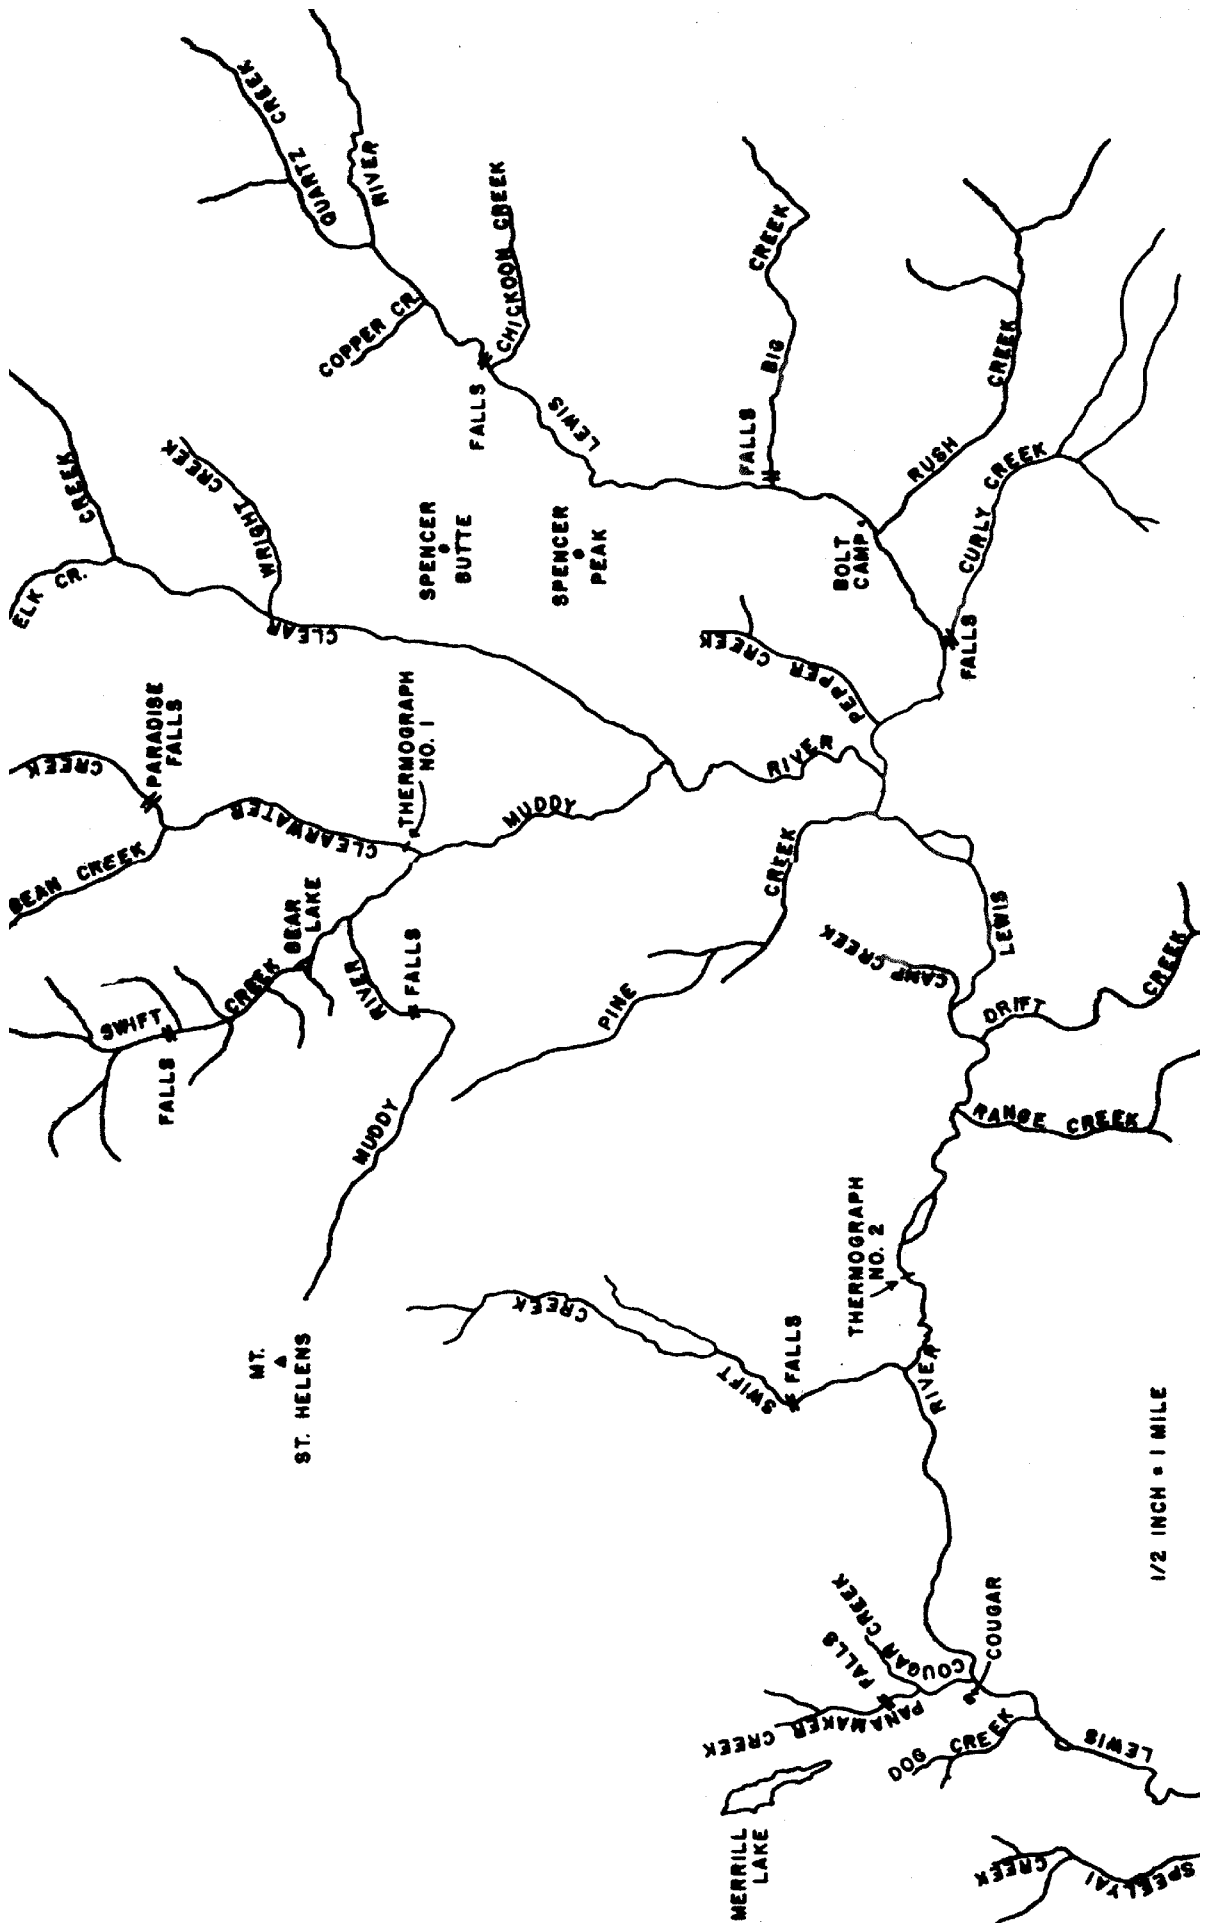

Source:
Report on the 1956 survey of the North Fork of the Lewis River above Yale Dam.
John S. Chambers, Washington Department of Fisheries,
April 1957

Preliminary

The upper Lewis River, that part above Yale dam, consists of the main stem of the north fork of the Lewis River, which flows through the Meadows area from Mount Adams, and its tributaries. The main tributary is the Muddy River which has its source on Mt. St. Helens. See accompanying map, Figure 1.

From the preliminary survey it was found that falls impassable to fish are on the main Lewis River above Chickoon Creek, on Big Creek approximately 100 yards upstream from the confluence with the Lewis, on Curly Creek at the mouth, and on Swift Creek approximately two miles upstream. Rush, Pepper, Pine, Camp, and Drift Creeks are too precipitous and rocky to provide extensive areas suitable for spawning of salmon. Range Creek has some spawning areas in the lower stretches.

The Muddy River is blocked to salmon by a series of falls located approximately one and a half miles above the confluence of Smith Creek. Smith Creek has a falls about six miles above Muddy River. The upper tributaries to Smith Creek are either obstructed by falls or are unsuitable for spawning. Clearwater Creek flows over Paradise falls about five and one-half miles from the mouth. Clear Creek has no obstructions in the lower seven miles, and Forest Service reports indicate that it is unobstructed for many miles above this point.

1/2 INCH = 1 MILE
